Sleep Apnea Centre Gives Patients the Chance to Dream

About four hundred years ago, Thomas Dekker described sleep as the golden chain that ties health and our bodies together. Little has changed in that time. But what if that chain is broken? It is estimated that sleep apnea affects up to four per cent of the male population and two per cent of the female.

This Book Could Make You Sick to Your Stomach

When was the last time you read a book that contained a message so essential to your wellbeing that it made you sick to your stomach? This happens to each of us on a daily basis when we watch the news on television or read a newspaper, and we are accosted with the various abuses that take place within the general population, as well as in the political, business and health-care environments. The publication Squandering Billions is one such text.
